DAVE HOLLAND'S MIRROR EYELIDS

LOCAL CELEBRITY CAN SEE THROUGH HIS CLOSED OPTIC.

Dr. James Conlisk's pink tea with socially a pronounced success. Lord Sinclair was properly presented and everything was lovely. But one thing not down on the program was discovered. Major Monteath had the seat of honor at the theater last night. Next to him sat Dave Holland. Now the Major is a musician of note and can detect the minutest quaver or the slightest fluting of a note. When the prima donna, Miss Florence Grace, had finished her stunt, the Major nudged Dave in the ribs to call his attention to the flute-like notes of Miss Grace. The optics of Dave remained closed, however, but yet his articulation was all right. The Major informed him that she was the tall sinuous blonde, and Dave responded with, "Yes, the one next to the tall one," while his eyelids remained closed. The Major looked at him in amazement. After the theater while enjoying the hospitality of Dr. Conlisk in his bachelor apartments, the former Montanans again referred to the closed optic incident at the theater.

"Well," said Dave, "you have discovered me. The fact of the matter is that when I close my eyes the entire house is visible to me. The lids of my eyes form a sort of revolving mirror. Why, once upon a time I was down to Oakland during the racing season and visited the track for the purpose of enjoying the sport. Now, I never bet on horse races, but in this case a young man whom I had met in Manhattan, was sitting next to me. He was giving me a tip and at the same time attempting to touch me for a ten-spot, on a sure winner. I pulled out a hundred, held it in my hand, closed my eyes and surveyed the field. I told him to place the money on 'Time-to-take-a-drink,' a 30 to 1 shot. Did I win? Well, how could I do anything else. This second sight, or mirror blinds of mine have never deceived me yet. I was stopping at the Palace at the time, and when we came back with the money the report went around the bay that another Pittsburgh Phil was on the turf."

SUPERB COMPANY AT THE PAVILION

BOTHWELL BROWNE MUSICAL COMEDY COMPANY OPENS TO CROWDED HOUSE.

The Bothwell Brown Musical Comedy Company opened last night at the Pavilion theater and lived up to all its promises. The house was crowded to the doors and every one went home well pleased with the performance. The evening opened with "Fun Behind the Scenes," a one-act musical playlet, filled with mirth and jollity. The rising curtain discloses a bevy of pretty girls in attractive costumes, who sang and danced their way into the hearts of the audience at once. Mr. Paul Stanhope Angelo, the comedian, started the fun as the callboy of the greenroom and was well received. His local hits and queer mannerisms were taken as if he was an old favorite here, which he will be shortly. His song, "Wouldn't It Be a Dream," localized, went big.

The Grace sisters, Florence and May, proved to be very pretty girls, and when they sang, "How Would You Like to Have Me for a Sweetheart," there were many chaps in the baldheaded row, like Barkus, extra willing. Miss Jessie Millar as Papita, looked stunning and carried off the honors of the evening. Her funny scene with Angelo was the vital spark of the first act. She made several changes of costume, each one prettier than the last. She is sure to be a favorite in Tonopah. Milt Barron, as the French count, was certainly an ideal old roue, such as frequent the green room in Eastern cities. The closing number, "The Bachelor and the Maids," is the prettiest sextette since Floradora. It was done by Browne's famous dancing girls, the Misses Guy, Florence Grace, Julia Grassel, May Grace, Florence Van Horn, Myrtle Gulle and Caine Clayton.

The second act, "Hiene's Hotel," served to introduce Angelo in a German character. He ran the hotel on a plan entirely of his own and succeeded in getting an immense amount of fun out of it. Harry Lancaster, as the stuttering bellboy, ably seconded Angelo in running the hotel. Between him and the landlord they kept things lively during the act. Fred Thaw, as Johnny Jones, made good with his character songs. His automobile song is quite a novelty and his dancing deserves mention. Mr. Barron, as the broken down actor, had some troubles of his own with the German hotel keeper, when he tried to enlist his services as a Thesplan.

Miss Frieda Guy introduced some clever dancing in the bell song. Myrtle Gulle, the little girl on the end, has a bright and charming personality. May Grace received several encores for her song, "Irish Rosie." Florence Grace sang that difficult song, "Jealous," and proved that these two sisters are exceptionally talented.

Miss Millar closed the performance with "The Grand Army on Parade," during which a large American flag was unfurled, showing a tableau of the "Spirit of '76."

Manager Angelo has many other good things up his sleeve to offer the people of Tonopah during his stay.

HYDRANT QUESTION DISCUSSED AT MEETING YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

The committee of twelve, appointed at the citizens' meeting Tuesday evening, to consider a plan for installing additional hydrants in the unprotected districts in this city, met in the offices of McIntosh & Cooke yesterday afternoon. A general discussion was participated in by members of the committee as to water pressure, best site for hydrants and other matters pertaining to securing this city against a water famine at the time of a fire. Several sub-committees were appointed to handle the matter and when they are ready to report it is presumed the installing of hydrants will be immediately carried out.

This statement leaves but one avowed aspirant, up to date, for the position of district attorney on the Democratic ticket. He is the Hon. Cleveland Baker, former assistant district attorney.
